1. Dischidocaulon
gigas, hermanni, neostylus, stylus

Handwritten text in Devanagari script, likely a letter or a page from a manuscript. The text is written in a cursive style. A small, simple line drawing of a person's head and shoulders is visible in the center of the page, facing right. The drawing is done in the same ink as the text.

Busby's Sentence—III

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a letter or a personal note. The text is written on a piece of paper with a vertical crease. There are three small, simple line drawings of a person's head and shoulders, positioned at the top left, middle right, and bottom left of the page. The drawings are done in a sketchy, expressive style. The handwriting is fluid and somewhat slanted, with many loops and flourishes. The overall appearance is that of a personal, handwritten document.

"Habit"—Professor William James—III

The first of the three habits is that of the mind, which is the habit of thinking. The second is that of the body, which is the habit of acting. The third is that of the soul, which is the habit of feeling. The first habit is the most important, for it is the foundation of all the others. The second habit is the most difficult, for it is the habit of acting against the impulses of the body. The third habit is the most natural, for it is the habit of feeling. The first habit is the most important, for it is the foundation of all the others.
